A Note from CEO Sara Scott

EDI or DEI: Are We Getting Caught up in Semantics?

Many thought leaders are now saying "EDI" instead of "DEI" I understand the argument as to why Equity has to be the starting place when we speak about "equity, diversity, and inclusion."

My concern lies with the community-at-large and their understanding of the terms. We have finally come to a place where It rolls off most tongues. And there is no need for further explanation when I say "DEI."

I have recently noticed when I have said "EDI"; I get somewhat of a blank stare until people catch on or at least act like they know what I am talking about. The point to all of this is that we want to pass on the message that "EDI/DEI" is now a social justice and racial justice tool and focus our energy on doubling down during this time of racial reckoning, not which letter is most important.

Whatever we choose, let's all commit to making sure the people we serve and the people we are trying to reach both know what we are talking about, no matter the order of the letters in the acronym.

This Just In...

New rule requiring EDI training as part of your CLE credits. You can read the new Rule and Regulation below. "I was proud to be one of those that testified to make this happen! Thank you to those who helped make this a reality!"
